

IT'S YOUR HONOR

Link With the Past

To THE USGA:

Under separate cover I am sending you manuscript of story "The League of the Iroquois." Perhaps the only relationship between the Indian League and our own Golf League is that each, although small, had the definite purpose of promoting good will.

Unthinking people often believe that primitive unlettered people have no mission or contribution to make and that the small number of unlettered Indians forming the Ancient League of the Iroquois had no particular importance. I should like to call attention to the fact that they were as far advanced culturally as most of the groups which figure in the Old Testament.

The history of the Iroquois League is filled with myth and legend. I spent several weeks in reviewing the various books and stories that have been written on the subject. The material I have presented is factual. The various clubs in the Golf League are making a special effort this year to make known the socializing and character building aspects of golf. In May we had a big dinner, guests from component clubs, museum displays, etc., to bring out these facts. The League of the Iroquois survives because its officers and leaders are real gentlemen.

Atomic Workers Take to Golf

To THE USGA:

Two years ago a small group of golfers here at the Bettis Atomic Power Division undertook the formation of the Bettis Wednesday Golf League. At the time we wrote you to procure copies of the Rules of Golf for each member. The league has operated continuously since its inception in 1956 in strict accordance to these Rules in order to promote the aims expressed in our constitution: ". . . the enjoyment of the game of golf as a competitive sport."

The league has flourished beyond all expectations, to the point where golfers who previously played in a most casual manner now insist on following the Rules to the letter, whether in or out of league play. Elected officers and appointed committees have governed under a definitive constitution with great success during the previous two years and anticipates even greater success in the future. Growth has been extremely gratifying from 35 members in 1956 to 120 in 1958.
